TO ORGANIZE A LADIES' CIRCLE OF THE G. A. R.

Formation of One is Planned for Scotland and Its Vicinity.

A LAWN FETE THURSDAY NIGHT

Two Well Known People Are Suffering from Severe Cases of Pneumonia, One Near Death, the Other Beyond Wesley Chapel, Other Notes.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTSBURGH, June 16.—The organization of the Ladies' Circle in the G. A. R. is an auxiliary of Colonel Ellsworth Post, G. A. R. of this place, has been taken up by a number of the women of town and its vicinity, headed by Mrs. H. B. Lee, who is exhibiting interest in the movement. As the initial step in the project, Mrs. Lee has arranged for a lawn fete and social at the Lee home at the corner of Spring street and Edwin avenue, on Thursday evening of this week.
Mrs. Lee has been asked by a number of other women of Scotland to take the lead in this plan, Mrs. Lee having for a number of years been a member of the Connellsville branch of the organization, which number about 60 members in good standing.
Those women eligible for membership in this auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic are the wives, widows, daughters, sisters, granddaughters or nieces of members of the G. A. R. There are a good many of these eligible for members in Scotland and its vicinity. It is believed that quite a good sized organization can be formed here.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice.
"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to put on a few pounds and not have to doctor it every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of the food from being taken up by the blood and they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste."

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be actively supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars into fat. It is not a stimulant, it is merely a perfect natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution: While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not be used by those who are suffering from its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.—Adv.

The Saison

"WORMWOOD."
The principal parts of "Wormwood," at the Saison today are so capably portrayed that it is a splendidly adjusted dramatic balance is the result. Ethel Kaufman, a 15-year-old leading woman, as Pauline is wonderfully appealing and charming in the character of the unhappy little heroine. Few actresses come to mind who could have so perfectly both looked and played this role which is by turns romantic, pathetic and then suddenly great with new tragedy. John Sullivan as Gaston Beauvais, the absolute head, gives a rendition of the character which can only be called masterful in its realism. His manner is wonderful and as he sinks lower and lower in the abyss the aban-doner of his life the successive changes are carried out till the great climax where he meets his four-fold punishment meted out to him for his self-indulgence. Charles Arthur makes an effective and sympathetic characterization of Silvan Gaidel, the young priest, and the same may be said of Edgar Davenport, always a favorite, Lillian Dilworth and others of the long cast.

Robert Hooley and Frances Nelson appear in an Imp. film, "The Pursuit of Happiness," "A Pittsburg Romance" is also featured. The Animated Weekly is filled with many interesting reels. "The Comedy," "No Money," "The Comedy," "The Comedy," it is a split comedy showing two different pictures. Tomorrow the three reel "Who Pays?" series is "The Comedy," "The Comedy," "The Comedy," ing play on that subject, all of which point to a timely moral. These pictures are creating a great sensation and are attracting good audiences.
"The Pittsburg Romance" also comes.

SPELTER SOAKS.

High Prices May Force Sheet Mills to Suspend.
The situation that has developed from the unprecedented rise in spelter is beginning to assume a serious aspect in the Youngstown district, and unless relief is soon found, sheet mills will have to be shut down.

The price of galvanized pipe has been advanced $19 a ton, and manufacturers are still losing money. This high rate has cut the demand so that the pipe mills are badly affected.

PANNIERE LOOPER UP WITH FLOWER GARLANDS.

Even an experienced dressmaker would find it doubtful about attempting this skirt, which hangs easily at the bottom, yet is pulled out tautly at the hips. But the panniers are really pulled separately to the short, full skirt in which most of the gaiters occur at the sides. Bands of Nattier blue velvet on which are applied gar-lands of small pink roses, cover the sides which attach panniers to skirt.
The bodice is simply a broad sash of the prettiest silk, edged with Nattier velvet. Above is a yoke of shadow lace.

theran Church attended the monthly which refreshments were served.

State Association of Stationary Engineers to Meet in Pittsburgh

The sixteenth annual convention of the Pennsylvania state organization of the National Association of Stationary Engineers will be held on Friday and Saturday of this week, June 15 and 16, at Pittsburgh. Officers of the state organization hope to make this meeting the largest since Pennsylvania stationary engineers began holding annual meetings.

Besides the business program, the convention will include a number of special trips for delegates and guests. Preparations are being made by the Pittsburgh women's reception committee to take care of the lady guests from elsewhere, an attractive program having been outlined for the entertainment of the ladies.

Official headquarters will be at the Monaca Hotel, Pittsburgh, where the sessions will be held and where the exhibition of fixtures, tools and devices in connection with the convention will be held under the auspices of the National Exhibitors Assn.

REQUEST ORDER FOR RIFLES.

Youngstown Plant too Busy Working for Uncle Sam.

Owing to the press of orders from the United States government for shells and ordnance, the William Todd Company of Youngstown has been compelled to turn down an order for 600,000 rifles ordered from one of the allies. The plant is operating to capacity on an order from Uncle Sam for shells, which are to be delivered to the arsenal at Frankfort, near Philadelphia.

This order will keep the plant operating until April, 1917. The order for rifles was offered to a number of other firms, but was turned down in each case because of inability to get the proper kind of machinery.

LARGER CAR SUPPLIES

Total on June 1 is 255,295. Against 202,209 May 1.

Statistical statement No. 5, issued by the American Railway Association committee on railroads, shows that the total surplus on June 1 is 255,295 against 202,209 on May 1. The increase in surplus over May is chiefly in Groups 3 and 5 (Central North and Southeast).

The total surplus on June 1 was 255,295, against 202,209 on May 1 and 176 on June 1, 1915. The surplus for May is less than that shown in statistical statement No. 1 and is due to corrected figures since the issue of statistical statement No. 1.

The Colonial

By the time the Kodak Polycope company had arranged to exhibit its new motion picture, "The Spoilers," some features of the original environment had been eliminated. It was necessary to restore them to preserve the atmosphere of the original work. Main Street, in the city of Nimes, had been wrecked by a flood, and then eliminated by fire that followed when the ruins were destroyed. With the aid of old photographs, every detail was restored, for this reconstruction of the ruins of Nimes, the city of the black stones of Rome.

It may be recalled in the book that the authors, who had under the false shadow of local advice, taken their property, in revenge destroyed the mining camp of Midas. This was visualized in vivid style, as an old mining settlement, and then eliminated by fire that followed when the ruins were destroyed. With the aid of old photographs, every detail was restored, for this reconstruction of the ruins of Nimes, the city of the black stones of Rome.

This sensational moving picture success will be the attraction at the Colonial Theatre on June 16 and 17, matinee and night.

The Globe

"Towns of Mars," a Vitaphone in three acts, presenting Dorothy Kelly and James Morrison, "The Third Commandment," a three act Vitaphone production of unusual interest, featuring Tom Moore and Marguerite Court, and an "Eminent Comedy," "Mistake No. 1," featuring "Disengagement" are being shown today at the Globe Theatre. Patrons of the theatre are looking for the first episode of "The Golden Rule," a serial featuring Anita Stewart and Earl Williams, to be shown early in July. The picture has met with wonderful success, and has created much interest among moving picturegoers.

Woman's World

College Girl at Head of Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage.

Copyright by Edmonston.

Miss Alice Paul of New Jersey is chairman of the Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage.

Miss Paul is a graduate of Swarthmore college and has a M. A. and Ph. D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She is also a graduate of the New York school of philosophy and studied at the Universities of Birmingham and London. She was formerly chairman of the congressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage association and formerly a member of the board of the Pennsylvania State Woman Suffrage association.

The Congressional Union For Woman Suffrage is an organization which has as its basic work the establishment of a national suffrage amendment. The women most interested in the suffrage movement felt that during the coming of a new administration was the psychological moment for reviving interest in, rather, creating a new interest in the demand by women for an amendment to the national constitution enshrining the enfranchisement of women. It was to this end that the Congressional union was formed, and which Miss Alice Paul at its head, and which demonstrated in no unimpeachable terms the great strength of the movement for a national suffrage amendment.

Suffrage history was made that day preceding the inauguration of President Wilson, when approximately 8,000 women marched from the capitol at Washington up Pennsylvania avenue, past the White House and invaded the Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This demonstration was so beautiful in its pageantry and allegorical features that it very nearly overshadowed the interest excited in the minds of the people by the inaugural ceremonies themselves, and the Sixty-third congress entered upon its term of office fully informed upon one point at least—that many women were demanding the amendment.

Finger Nail Spots. It is now thought that the white spots which frequently appear on finger nails are due to the presence of gas in the substance of the nail. They occur much more frequently during youth and in women and are usually found in persons of a nervous type. There is no remedy for them and no means of prevention except the avoidance of injury to the nails.

A Relief For an Oliver. Manager— I say, can you get anything like a real doctor in this jay town to attend a sick actor? Village Inhabitant— Sure. Just go to that corner grocery. You'll find a man there who's all right at curing hams— Baltimore American.

Far Apart. Mother— I hear that Harry Smith is the worst boy in school, and I want you to keep as far from him as possible. Tommy— I do, ma. He is always at the head of our class.— Boston Transcript.

Spiteful. Patience— This paper says it is estimated that the annual catch of lobsters in the world is 125,000,000. Patricia— You haven't caught one yet, have you, dear?— Yankers Statesman.

HUERTA, HARLEM LANDLORD.

Dietator Puts Mexican Bonds Into New York Flag House.

By putting $200,000 in Mexican bonds into six Harlem apartment houses General Huerta has become a New York landlord, it is said.

The houses are six-story structures at 117 to 143 West One Hundred and Forty-first street and 130 to 153 West One Hundred and Forty-second street. They cover part of the old Watt farm tract, which was sold two years ago by the Pinkney estate.

Title to the property was transferred not long ago to Francis C. Mason of Wilkesburg, Pa., but when payment was made it was learned that he represented John De Kay, a close friend of Huerta. The $200,000 stands for the equity above mortgages aggregating $1,525,000. The bonds were part of an issue of $20,000,000 issued during the Huerta regime.

SOON TWO MILLION AUTOS.

Number on Registers Last Dec. 31 in America Was 1,665,984.

The number of automobiles registered in the United States Dec. 31, 1915, reached the total of 1,665,984, according to returns just issued by the department of agriculture. In addition there were 41,335 motor trucks and 132,515 motorcycles. The fees paid to state road funds amounted to $101,841 in the year, and the gross revenue for registration was no less than $12,270,035.

New York state led, with a registration revenue of $1,520,822; California was a close second, with $1,338,785; Pennsylvania was next, with $1,185,030, and Iowa was fourth, with $1,040,135. Nebraska was last, with $432,131.

Good For Shoemakers. Shoes to the amount of 71,000,000 pairs must be provided for the armies in Europe during a year of war. Almost exact copies of the United States army shoes are being worn by the troops of the warring nations.

France Will Adopt Orphans. All children in France made orphans by the war will become wards of the French government. They will be educated and otherwise protected and looked after according to a plan to be later decided upon.

STUNNING BATHING COSTUME

sky. The costume pictured here will give her such a memory. It is of the ever serviceable black satin, lent distinction by an underblouse of red and white striped silk. The coquettish cap is red and white, and the white shoes are laced with red ribbons.

ELABORATE CREATION.

Frills and Bows Make Taffeta Frock Very Smart.

APPROXIMATE DRESS.

Some frocks this season are plain, but we would by no means include in the category the frock pictured in the illustration.

The gown is developed in pale gray tulle, and the skirt is covered with wide circular flounces, held beneath a straight panel at the back. The bodice is of tulle, with sleeves and collar of white net, finished with stiff ribbons. The wide flounce ends in a huge bow placed sideways over the hip.

Domestic Hints. Never use tulle to clean mirrors or windows, as it sheds lint and often causes streaks.

Wash linoleum and oilcloth with lukewarm water, then polish with a soft woolen cloth which has been dipped in milk.

Use no soap on window glass. Use old muslin and clean, soft water. A cotton cloth dipped in a little alcohol will add brilliancy to the final rub.

If white of egg is applied with a small camel-hair paint brush to fly specks on gilt frames, then rubbed gently with a soft cloth the specks will disappear.

When your house plants look a trifle dejected and water does not revive them try putting coffee grounds on the roots three times a week, then once a week give them a tablespoonful of olive oil. Do not allow the earth to become hard and dry.

The Useful Sailer. Every one is glad that the sailor shape is in evidence in spring millinery. Many hats there are of picture type, poke shapes, too, that are vastly becoming. But for general wear nothing is so smart as the sailor. It will probably be worn a good deal when warmer weather comes.

Ether Removes Grease Stains. Ether is a very good thing to remove grease stains from wearing apparel. Another method is to dip the garment in tepid water, then place it in cold water to which a little borax has been added. The article should be soaked for several hours and then dried quickly.

Tactful Man. He—Do you know, you are so clever and charming and brilliant that I really feel embarrassed in your presence. She—But you haven't really you mean it. He (reassuringly)—Oh, I do so. I'll get over it when I know you better—Life.

CHAPTER I.

At nine o'clock in the morning, punctual to the second, Floodie Fisher unlocked the door marked "Hall Bonistelle, Artist-Photographer," and walked into the office.

The large light room was vacant. Floodie shook her head in sorrowful disappointment at her employer's tardiness, and shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, dear!" she muttered impatiently. "Just what I expected." Then, with a shake of her head and one who says, "It must be done," she walked in and listened outside Hall Bonistelle's bedroom door. For a moment she stood poised, awkwardly graceful, perhaps, so original was her attitude. She knocked with firmness. The summons was peremptory, yet it had the secret intimation of a delectable mother for her only child. The only answer was a not un-musical baritone growl.

She banged on the door again. "This time she really meant it," Mr. Bonistelle! You must get up immediately—come on now!"

A wait—then the unwilling reply, "All right!"

Floodie walked back to the office, frowning, and set down at her desk. A leaf from the calendar page was slipped off, the desk top was dusted with a cloth; then she stopped suddenly. The elevator door had banged.

Almost immediately there entered to her the sad young janitor, Mr. Alfred Smallish. He gave a pathetic hopeless look at Floodie and hung at anchor in the doorway, weakly.

"Morning, Miss Fisher," he said, and grinned.

Floodie gave a glance at him, casually, then gazed with more interest. Pale blue eyes, a large Roman nose, wide-open ears and a quivering mouth had Alfred. His chin was that of a lion, sloping back weakly to a prominent Adam's apple.

She fumbled over the photographs on the table behind her.

"Alfred," she said in the voice of a school matron, "did you see a picture of me I had here on the table the other day?"

He turned fire-red. "You—you didn't want that picture, did you, Miss Fisher?" His eyes implied her wildly, vainly. "Well, I'll bring it back, if you say so; only, I thought, maybe—"

"Well, Alfred Smallish! I like that!" Floodie ejaculated.

"Oh, Miss Fisher—you see, well, I didn't quite dare to ask you, and—well, you know, I thought—it's just grand of you, Miss Fisher—I'd think the world of it, and—couldn't you possibly—"

"That's enough, Alfred! I don't dare to discuss it. You just walk that picture back immediately!" Floodie's voice was sharp, but . . . well, Floodie couldn't help pitying him. She weakened. "Perhaps, I'll give you one, sometime, I'll see."

Mr. Smallish beamed with pleasure, but he had a talent for blundering. "Some folks mightn't think you was pretty, Miss Fisher, but I think—"

Floodie whipped out her watch. "Gracious snakes!" she cried, "where's Mr. Bonistelle's eggs?"

"I'll go down and see if they're ready, Miss Fisher." He turned bravely.

"Well, hurry up, then! If his break fast isn't here when he comes, he's liable to eat the tablecloth and go right back to bed. Quick now!"

"Yes!" Mr. Smallish left in do-jection. Floodie walked swiftly into the studio and knocked again at her employer's door. "Mr. Bonistelle! Are you ready for breakfast?" she called. Floodie's tone had changed; decided as it was, it had a touch of "was" almost musical. Her face had changed, also. She stood as it awaiting a vision.

Footsteps were heard in Hall's bedroom. Now, there are two kinds of men: those who are shocked even unto mortification by being discovered in the act of shaving, and those who take a malicious delight in their outrageous condition. Hall Bonistelle opened the door and protruded his belated face shamelessly, grinning.

Even disheveled as he was at present, scandalously tousled and bedaubed with soap-suds, his smile was disarming.

Floodie's adoration of him, though of the maternal order, did not lessen her firmness. "Do you realize how much you've got to do today, Mr. Bonistelle?"

and then rather unwillingly laid them aside. The others who tore briskly on, each received a keen, shrewd look. They were filled or thrown away. Little and whimsical and odd, Floodie's appearance had something of the humor of a puppy, the sad wisdom of a monkey. The combination made her face pathetic. Crinkly, colorless hair and hazel eyes had Floodie. Her fine, regular teeth were her best asset, and when she smiled, her main relief from pain came from her costume, which was careless, to her gestures, which were queer, Floodie Fisher was an original. She had charm and magnetism. Whether she made one laugh or weep, eccentric little Floodie was distinctly lovable.

Mr. Smallish now reappeared with a loaded breakfast tray.

"Put him on that table in the studio," Floodie commanded.

"I've those giddy green garlands come for tonight!" she asked.

"Why, yes, they're out in the hall, Miss Fisher. What time does the party begin?"

"One minute past ten."

"Will there be many here, Miss Fisher?"

"Oh, I don't know, Alfred, about twenty, I suppose—men, ladies and women. Especially women! They don't usually refuse Mr. Bonistelle's studio invitations, I notice! There'll be too many anyway. There won't be half of 'em come till the theater's over, though. We've invited a squad of actresses."

Alfred stopped, his arms loaded with garlands. "What, real ones?"

"No, only hair-rips, I guess. Not nearly so real as the other women who'll be here, anyway. There are more good actresses of the stage than on Alfred! It'll be good as a play for me!"

Alfred gazed longingly from the threshold, his eyes afixe. "Say, Miss Fisher, are you going to be dressed up like you was the last time?"

She dropped a fantastic courtesy. "Precisely the same, Alfred; our good old friend Crepe de Chine. Now you gallop along with those evergreens before your eyes drop out, Mr. Smallish!"

Alfred left, with the love light un-extinguished.

Floodie went into the studio and pounded at the chamber door again. "Mr. Bonistelle! Hurry up! Your breakfast is awfully impatient. Come along! That old coffee is swearing already!"

Hall opened the door, grinning. "And I suppose those eggs are feeling rotten about it," he offered jauntily.

Floodie giggled delightedly and hovered over the table, giving it a few final touches.

Hall Bonistelle was attired in a purple drawing-gown, too evidently the gift of a loving, tasteless female. He approved of men—too "artistic," and I was fool enough to try to be independent. Result, I have to take photographs for a living. Well, Floodie, he's just likely to have left me a dime with a hole in it, and let it go at that!"

Floodie sighed in sympathy, and rose. "Well, those bills must be paid in any case! And there's just seventy-seven cents in the cash box!"

"Good Lord, is it as bad as that? Well, we'll have to collect a few bills in a hurry." Hall appeared to dismiss the subject.

But Floodie was not to be dissuaded. "Well, as you know his procrastination!" "They're all collected, Mr. Bonistelle!" she protested; "every last one! You can trust me to attend to that! And I've had to sit up and beg like a French poodle, too!"

Hall, walking back and forth, seemed not to be listening, but suddenly he turned to his assistant with a queer expression. He walked up to her and put his hand on her shoulder.

"See here, Floodie, have you taken out your salary regularly every week?"

advantage of her cleverness and zeal; her attractive oddity refreshed him, but to her deep baritone, her reserves of her temperament he was totally blind.

Floodie sat watching his long, slender hands engaged gracefully with fork and spoon. But, much as she loved to watch him, her conscience made her too uncomfortable. Reluctantly she withdrew her eager eyes.

"Well," she sighed, "now for business!"

She read aloud from the book. "At ten o'clock Mrs. Rona Royaton—" She looked up. "And you won't be half ready! I'll have to entertain her—and you know how I hate that woman!"

"Can you name one woman, Floodie Fisher, whom you do not get on with?" "No, I can't. They're all cats and rats and hogs and snakes and parrots! But that's no reason for keeping them waiting." Floodie ran her finger down the page. "Let's see—ten-thirty—Miss Dallys. Oh, no, I forgot! You took her yesterday."

"Carolyn's a certain a fine girl." Hall murmured dreamily, lighting a cigarette and watching his assistant unobtrusively.

"Carolyn?" Floodie fairly spit it out. "Since how long?"

"Ever since I neglected to pay my dinner bill on her, Floodie. I had to do something to soothe her ruffled feelings—so I began to call her Carolyn. What's the inevitable result? She's invited me for next Wednesday again. People always invite you again if you are rude enough, Floodie."

"You must have been pretty rude to Mrs. Royaton, then, by the way she runs after you! Why, she fairly clucks like a hen!"

"Oh, Mrs. Royaton! Ah, there I have another method! She's one of those women you can't possibly insult." Hall smiled with superiority. "Rena's got to the age, you know, when she prefers to be flattered."

"Don't all women like it?" Floodie demanded.

"No! You're too young, Floodie. You want compliments. Hall was triumphant. "It depends upon how you do it, you know. Rona wants it laid on thick. A woman doesn't demand subtlety, Floodie, after she gets to the thirty-five."

"Thirty-five! Mrs. Royaton is thirty-eight, if she's a day!"

"By the way, how old are you, Floodie?"

"What? Why, I'm only twenty-one!"

Hall laughed. "Plus five, makes twenty-six."

"I'm not!" she protested—but it was no use. He laughed at her till she flushed red and sought refuge in a bundle of bills. "There's a 'Please remit' from the Photo-Supply company," she announced, looking up. "What shall I do?"

"Oh, answer 'Necessity forbids'!" Hall shrugged his shoulders.

"Why, Mr. Bonistelle, don't you realize that we've simply got to pay that bill pretty soon, or they won't send up any more stuff? Oh, it's all very well for you to sit there in a red silk dressing gown and laugh and make aristocratic jokes! But I have to take all the kicks, and stand off the collectors!"

Hall applauded gracefully. "Say, Floodie, you've got your war boots on today, haven't you? What's the particular matter?"

"The matter!" Floodie looked down on him as from a mountain. "Where's the rent coming from, I'd like to know? Out of your cigarette smoke? You can smile and twist that waist, but you can't pay the rent, can you?"

"What?" he demanded suspiciously. "Oh, only—if you'd be willing—really I'd like to, you know—you know I've saved up a little money, Mr. Bonistelle—and, well, it might help you temporarily—all you could—"

Hall threatened her with savage playfulness. "Floodie Fisher," he said, "now, don't you try to fib!"

Floodie tried to pull away but it was too delicious. "Oh, I don't know," she murmured. "Not for two or three weeks, perhaps. That's all right." Now it was she who caught hold of his arm.

"But I wanted to tell you something, Mr. Bonistelle—if you wouldn't mind—if you just let me—"

"What?" he demanded suspiciously. "Oh, only—if you'd be willing—really I'd like to, you know—you know I've saved up a little money, Mr. Bonistelle—and, well, it might help you temporarily—all you could—"

Hall threatened her with savage playfulness. "Floodie Fisher," he said, "now, don't you try to fib!"

the paper in his hand. "It was directed this morning at eight twenty-seven o'clock. You see I have been prompt, sir."

Hall restrained an overwhelming curiosity. "Where did you find it?" he asked faintly.

"Ah, curious. Most curious. An eccentric man, your uncle, Mr. Bonistelle. It was found in his library. In fact, if you will believe me, between the leaves of his own book—I mean, of course, the one he wrote himself—'Race Suicide and How to Prevent It.'"

"Race Suicide and How to Prevent It." I believe it is called. I have not yet had the pleasure of reading it."

Mr. Doremus stopped, and gave the young man a steady inspection. "I understand that you will be twenty-eight upon the fourth of May, Mr. Bonistelle. Am I correct?"

"Yes, Tomorrow, Why?"

Mr. Doremus solemnly held up his hand. "Wait!" he commanded. "Let me, before I go through the whole document, read this one clause."

Floodie, peeping through the door, was breathlessly listening. Hall was growing white.

"Er—here it is." Mr. Doremus proceeded to read solemnly. "The residue of my estate I leave to my beloved nephew, Hall Cutler Bonistelle, on condition that he be married before he reaches the age of twenty-eight years."

"Oh, I know it! Well, it's all up then—just my luck!"

"If, however, at the beginning of his twenty-eighth birthday he is still unmarried, this residue shall be the property of my beloved cousin, Jonas Bingsbury, as a testimony to our youthful friendship." Mr. Doremus looked up.

"Oh, upward of four millions, I expect," said Mr. Doremus withunction. "And I lose all that, just because I'm a single man!" Hall dropped, limp and gloomy, into a chair.

Mr. Doremus bowed soberly. "Your uncle held strong views, Mr. Bonistelle. He firmly believed in marriage. He thought it a duty. He maintained high ideals for the future of the race."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" cried Hall. "I know all about that. Didn't Uncle John talk me to death on the subject? Why didn't he get married himself?"

"An unfortunate love-affair, I understand, prevented his putting his own theories into practice," said Doremus. "I think—mind, I do not say as positively—but it is possible that, had you—knowing, you understand, his peculiar theories—"

"Acted accordingly?" said Hall. "Married on the chance of becoming his heir? Bright idea! But it's too late now. Lord!"

"It is, as you say, too late, practically. I presume," Mr. Doremus remarked. "But, legally, I must remind you that the time has not yet expired. You have until midnight, you understand, in which to qualify for the inheritance. Much has been done in fourteen hours, Mr. Bonistelle."

"Fourteen hours?" Hall repeated. "Why, fourteen days would be little enough time. You can't put a thing like marriage through on a time schedule, you know, can you?"

"I confess I do not know," said Mr. Doremus, rising.

Hall sat in a brown study, regarding his boots, as Mr. Doremus prepared to leave. Floodie, by eye, bright with excitement, tiptoed back into the office.

IMMIGRATION INTO COUNTRY SHOWS BIG SLUMP SINCE WAR

Steel Mills Certain to Face
Labor Shortage if Boom Occurs.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES

With Excess of Immigrants Over 1 millions of 1914, for 1915 Year Ended June 30, 1914, Nine Months
Up to March Shows Only 72,136.

Up to this date the coke works, blast furnaces and steel works have had no difficulty in securing an adequate supply of labor, though their operations have increased very actively since the first of the year. While as respects the steel mills the operations have increased further, in the past fortnight, says the American Steel Market, some of the steel mills are indeed operating practically at capacity. There remains no doubt however, that an absolutely full operation all round, such as has occurred in the past, would be impossible at least very difficult. The threatened labor shortage has been referred to a number of times, and some of it would be more apparent were it not for certain special conditions. In the first place, there has been at steel works and on the outside, very little construction work, which employs substantially the same general class of labor as is involved in the manufacture of coke, pig iron and steel. In the second place, a considerable portion of the steel made is either exported direct or is fabricated for export in machine shops which do not employ this class of labor.

It is well known that the labor employed at coke works, blast furnaces and steel works is largely migratory in character. In times of depression many of the men go home, while when business revives they come back. This movement cannot be traced well in the immigration statistics because it is lost in the larger figures representing the movement of other classes. Foreigners who come to our shore to engage in agriculture or the old clothes business, or persons are not similarly migratory. In the steel industry it is well known that there was a strong tendency to immigrate in the fiscal year ended June 1, 1913, for that was a very busy twelve-month period. The blast furnaces and steel works, and a distinct tendency to emigrate during the following twelve months. The immigration statistics show an increase, rather than a decrease, in alien immigration, from 1,197,992 to 1,214,190.
The total movement of all classes into and out of the country showed a net influx of 73,425 persons in the fiscal year 1914, and a net influx of 87,967 in the following fiscal year. A decrease of 14,542, or 16.5 per cent. It is difficult relating to the steel industry, and the branches could be collected, a much greater decrease would undoubtedly be shown, and it might even be found that the net movement represented an efflux instead of an influx.

Even the figures of total movement into and out of the country show that there has been a remarkable change since the war started. The census of arrivals, counting all heads, whether aliens or citizens, whether or not the movement into or out of the country was expected to be permanent or not,
has been as follows: 14,141 ending June 30, 1913; 731,205, year ending June 30, 1914; 87,967, nine months ending March 31, 1915. If it is found for iron and steel continues to increase the industry will undoubtedly feel an effect from the conditions disclosed by these figures.

CAN'T DOWN DAVIDSON

There is no chance of any team getting the best of Davidson, this way things have been going lately. Manager George Krahnke's fourth nine went into battle yesterday afternoon against the Conestoga third nine and emerged a winner, 8 to 1. This is the second victory for the fourth team since it was organized. So far Manager George Krahnke's record is fourth team. Joe Krahnke of the third team to give him a scare, but he is still after the contest. There is a suspicion in some quarters that the third nine is afraid to look up with the speedy fourth team.
The Davidson fifth nine hooked up with the Conestoga Sluggers yesterday and won, 13 to 1. If the fourth team can't hook the third team for a game, Manager George Krahnke proposes to take on either the second or fifth team for a game. If he can dispose of all these times he will go after the first team to decide the Davidson championship.

Licensed to Wed.
Karl C. Kuhn and Josephine A.
Walsky both of Conestoga; Joseph McVie, Conestoga, and Mary R.
Mathias, Somersfield, were granted marriage licenses in Uniontown yesterday.
